

Dave,

On Sunday April 7, 2013 I was present and witnessed a demonstration for TruArmor. Coming into the presentation I was not sold on the product. I had seen videos of what the product could do, but felt it was too good to be true.

After watching you tell several people in the group to smash the window with a baseball bat you provided, no one in the group was able to smash the glass. At this time I asked you if I could try. I guess the only thing I remember is when you gave me that bat, smiled and told me to "be careful". I then proceeded to strike the window so many times that I lost track how many times I hit it, I actually got tired. Still not satisfied I asked you if I could try with something that I had in my car, all you said was "sure" and continued to smile. I retrieved 2 different types of police batons that I use for the Mobile Field Force Team that I am a member of. Dave you did not show any signs of concern when I did this and allowed me to strike the window. After the 1st strike with the expandable steel police baton it bent the baton. The funny thing is that I have used that same baton to break windows in the past without any issues. I then took the 2nd baton and struck the window numerous times so many times that I lost count and was unable to go through the window.

After witnessing and being part of the presentation I can now say that I am a believer in this this product, and would put it on my personal property and also recommend it to anyone that is trying to protect themselves.

Sincerely,

Vel Torlo
